

Educational Strategies

From the Desk of Dr. Catherine Strecker

Welcome to the first edition of the Educational Strategies Newsletter. Each quarter we will send you a newsletter that will highlight information that may help you in your vocation.

My mission is to provide people with the opportunity to engage in learning that takes advantage of their dominant intelligences and the multiple ways they can approach learning. My work is based upon the Gardner (1983) theory of multiple intelligences and involves assessments and strategies that have helped people tremendously.

The MIDAS assessment (Shearer, 1997) provides information to people that allows them a better understanding of themselves toward greater success. The creation of individual profiles shows people what they are really capable of accomplishing and facilitates their intellectual development. They are trained in strategies that help them gain a greater understanding of the individual learning styles, I found that people gained a clear understanding of their own learning styles when engaged in activities grounded in the Gardner (1983) theory of multiple intelligences.

I wish you an enjoyable Autumn season!

It's not how smart you are that matters, what really counts is how you are smart.

How Can Applying Multiple Intelligence Theory Help Students Learn?

- ✓ To manage their own learning
- ✓ To develop study strategies
- ✓ To motivate for learning
- ✓ To increase self-esteem
- ✓ To value their individual learning strengths
- ✓ To accurate personal narrative describing intellectual and creative life

ADD / ADHD

Ask yourself these questions:

1. Is it hard to sit still?
2. Is it hard to control behavior?
3. Is it hard to pay attention?

To determine if a child or adult has ADD or ADHD, a comprehensive evaluation and consultation is necessary to establish the diagnosis.

Come in or call anytime if you have any questions or wish to schedule a consultation.

Let us help you unlock your potential.
